Market Dull and Heavy, But Distinct Improvement in Tone.

EASIER MONEY

Break Which Followed Election Had Been Expected by Street.

New York, November 12.—A dull and steady market was seen in Wall Street to-day. Price changes were not important, but a distinct improvement in tone was evident. The market had every appearance of being sold out. every appearance of being sold out, and leaders of the bull narty resumed operations quietly for a further advance. Owing to a heavy decrease in loans and deposits the banks showed an increase in surplus reserves. The money situation continues to work easier.

money situation continues to work casior.

The break which followed the election was expected, but it was more sovere than the street had counted on. Professionals placed selling orders on Monday for execution at the opening Wednesday, believing that the public would huy stocks on a Roosevelt overthrow. It turned out that shout the only buyers were the professional traders, who had sold out just before the election. Evan these dropped stocks as they continued to decline, and it was not until Thursday that important banking interests came to the relief with heavy supporting orders. The decline was stopped after several of the important issues had recorded gross declines of 3 to 6 points.
